SCHOOL BOARD SEEKS CENTRAL BUILDING SITE

No Land Optioned Yet For High School Planned
In PWA Program

WILL VIEW LOCATIONS

$385,000 Bond Issue Vote
Call Will Be Certified
Before July 24

The East Liverpool district board of education today began a quest for a downtown site for a new high school, which will be part of the $700,000 PWA building program for which a $385,000 bond issue vote will be called at the Aug. 15 primary election.

Pointing out that no options have been obtained on any proposed tracts, the board members, at an adjourned session Monday night, said they will suggest sites Wednesday. They will view locations, ascertain prices and other details and consider the suggested places at a meeting Friday night. A definite selection probably will be made before the election pass judgment upon the program.

A tract about 300 feet square will be required for the high school, although a larger site is desired in order to provide a spacious lawn. The building will provide classrooms for 1,000 students in the sophomore, junior and senior classes and also a large gymnasium and auditorium.

Ready to Certify Resolution
Supt. H. G. Means, acting clerk during the absence of Emmett J. Gaston, now on his honeymoon, was instructed to certify the bond issue vote resolution to the board of election not later than July 24, the deadline for filing.

Formal application will be filed at once with the PWA at Columbus for a $315,000 grant. Tentative approval of the request has been given. It was announced.

In the event the voters approve the program, which, it was definitely announced, will include a junior high school, probably on a Pennsylvania avenue site in Oakland, East End, and a four or six-room elementary building on land now owned in Glenmoor, the 4 percent bonds will be sold to the state teachers' retirement system. W. E. Kershner, of Columbus, secretary of the system, expressed a willingness to acquire the issue, although the PWA has offered to purchase it.

A one-mill levy will be required to liquidate the bonds and $150,000 interest charges. County Auditor John H. Irwin advised the board.

Maintenance Cost $40,000 a Year
The cost of maintaining the three schools was estimated between $40,000 and $50,000 a year by the board, although estimates made by Mr. Means were considerably lower.

Based upon figures for the 1935-36 term, the enrollment in a downtown junior high school would be about 950. A teaching staff of 32 would be required. The senior high school, with slightly less than 1,000 students, would require about 33 teachers.

In the proposed East End Junior high school, which also will include an auditorium and probably a gymnasium, about 412 students would be enrolled, of whom 153 would come from the present Horace Mann school, 147 from Garfield and 112 from the Neville buildings. At least 12 teachers would be needed in the East End school.

Transfer of the seventh and eighth grade pupils in the Garfield school to the new junior high would mean the abandonment of the three portable buildings in the district. Three rooms in the Horace Mann and two in the Neville school zones would then be available to relieve crowded conditions in the six elementary grades.

CENTRALIZATION COST 4 MILLION FOR STATE

Pupil Transportation Brings Big
Outlay of Ohio Funds

By The Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, July 16.—Abandonment of the little red district school for a centralized system, a special legislative committee on education was told, costs the state $4,159,816 annually.

Dr. D. H. Sutton of the state department of education, informed the group last night that the huge expenditure is made for transporting 263,000 pupils in Ohio to centralized schools.

He predicted that when a law compelling drivers of school buses to wear 21 years of age takes effect Sept. 6, the transportation cost will increase $385,000 yearly. Many districts last term employed student drivers at $20 a month. M. L. Williams, superintendent of Miami county schools, urged retention of this system and outright ownership of buses by township school boards.

TARIFF POLICY DRAWS ATTACK

New Deal Ignores Efforts To Kill Law; German Agreement Sought

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 16.—Confronted with a demand for the abolition of the law on which it bases its reciprocal tariff policy, the new deal today gave every indication of going on with the program.

In fact, authoritative sources disclosed that the United States has offered to conclude a new reciprocal trade agreement with Germany. Secretary Hull made the offer in a note handed to Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador, before the latter left recently for a visit in Berlin.

Repeal Move Started
Luther is due back in Washington with Germany's reply Aug. 2. Hull's note answered overtly for a trade agreement made by Luther. It informed Germany the United States will be glad to conclude a reciprocal pact if basic agreement is reached that it will conform to what is termed the Roosevelt "equality of treatment" policy.

The demand for abolition of the reciprocal tariff law was voiced in the senate yesterday by Sen. McCarran (D., Nevada), who introduced a resolution to repeal the law, under which the President can lower or raise tariffs by as much as 50 percent in negotiating trade agreements which do not require the consent of the senate.

Many Difficulties Faced
The action by McCarran follows a Soviet-American trade pact announced last week. American manganese producers, in particular, have attacked this pact because it involves tariff concessions on Russian manganese.

In regard to the German-American situation, officials readily acknowledged that many difficulties exist in the way of an agreement. If the German government persists in seeking "balanced imports and exports."

Germany has been demanding that other countries buy as much from her as they sell to her. An existing German-American trade treaty expires in October because Germany is abrogating it then.

THIEVES LOOT HOME, DESTROY OIL SUPPLY

Automobile Trailer Stolen
In East End Monday

Vandals were active in East End Monday night, ransacking a home, destroying a large quantity of oil at a wholesale supply plant and stealing an automobile trailer, police reported.

Nothing was taken from the Thomas Kerr home at 144 Virginia avenue by intruders who searched drawers and cupboards after entering through a rear window.

A quantity of oil was taken and more than 300 gallons destroyed when a spigot was left open by thieves at the Wallover Oil Co. in Virginia avenue.

A two-wheeled automobile trailer, valued at $25, was taken from the side of a garage at the home of B. C. Dray, 410 Palisades street.

Dr. W. N. Bailey of West Fifth street also reported two men in a coupe drove away after taking a garden hose from his lawn.

POTTERS URGE ENACTMENT OF EMBARGO PLAN

Edminston Measure Indorsed
By Brotherhood as Its Session Nears End

SEEK TARIFF BARRIER

Delegates Will Act Today On
'Buy American' Campaign,
Leaders Predict

BULLETIN
The 43rd convention of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters adjourned here today at 12:15 p. m., to meet in 1936 at Atlantic City, N. J., after a speedy meeting session in which the last of 123 resolutions were voted upon and the officers' reports approved.

The National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, expecting to adjourn the 43rd convention tonight unless debate on pending questions prolongs the eight-day session, today indorsed the Edminston bill, now pending in congress, which provides for an embargo on pottery and other foreign-made products.

With 27 of the 127 resolutions introduced awaiting action, the delegates were instructed to urge the 55 subordinate unions, composed of 12,000 members, to call upon their congressmen to support the West Virginian's bill as means of additional tariff protection for the American ceramic industry against inroads from abroad.

Motion Picture Campaign Planned
The convention today also will spur the campaign to provide additional jobs by acting upon a request of the United States Potters' association to cooperate in a "Buy American" motion picture educational campaign. The manufacturers have asked the brotherhood to share in the expense of the movement.

A resolution was adopted at Monday afternoon's session, authorizing the executive board to make a survey on labor-saving machinery in the potteries. A measure recommending that congress tax the machinery was previously rejected.

Representatives of the sanitary branch of the industry, by resolution, were given permission to discuss their problems from the convention floor.

Election Law Changes Rejected
A resolution limiting the selection of the fifth and seventh vice presidents of the brotherhood from the shipping trades—warehousemen, packers, etc., was turned down. The officers are now held by George Turner of East Liverpool and Joshua Chadwick of Newell, W. Va., respectively.

A measure calling for the employment of two assistants to the executive board also was defeated. Advocates of the plan explained the aids would take part of the work from the officers and permit the latter to visit subordinate unions more often.

The delegates also voted against a plant organization plan to supplant local unions and establishment of a potters' central labor body.

The request of the cupbelters, batters and mouldrunners that they be permitted to substitute for jiggermen and dishmakers whenever necessary, after two years' experience on the bench, was opposed on the ground there were enough unemployed jiggermen to "fill in."

A resolution giving the warehousemen's local two wage conferees instead of one was rejected, since it was contrary to the representative regulations, officials said.

Organizer Hull Commended
National Organizer Frank Hull of East Liverpool was commended by resolution for his activities during the last year.

Jeff Davis of Cincinnati, "king of the hoboes," reported in his second talk before the convention, that he had advocated the purchase of American-made ware and assailed Japanese and other foreign ceramic products in a recent address at Youngstown.

Twenty resolutions were acted upon Monday. Today's business will include the officers' report, action against stock buying by employees in plants seeking financial backing, and selection of the 1936 convention city.

MAYOR OUTLINES PWA POWER PLAN

Municipal Ownership Plea
To Be Submitted Tonight
At Council Meeting

Mayor O. Earl Greenawald today prepared a statement which will be submitted to city council tonight, asking authorization to file an application for a PWA loan and grant for the construction of a $1,500,000 municipal power plant and distribution system here.

He will recommend that the proposal be subject to a referendum at the Nov. 5 election, that voters may be given an opportunity to pass judgment.

Text of Mayor's Statement
The executive's statement follows: "In July of 1933 the city council engaged Peter Loftus of Pittsburgh to make a preliminary study of a municipal light plant for our city. Since that time the estimate has been revised to present day costs and prices. This revised estimate has been used to arrive at the following facts and figures. The figures are merely approximate, but are conservative enough to use as a working basis.

"Under the public works administration the federal government is offering an outright grant of 45 percent of the total cost of a project. The city's share of the project is secured through the medium of mortgage revenue bonds, which the government has offered to purchase. These bonds carry an interest rate of 4 percent and mature over a period of 25 years. These mortgage revenue bonds would have as their security only the generating plant and distribution system, and would not be a lien against the city, nor could any millage be added to the tax duplicate to retire them.

JOHN R. McLANE, 26, DIES IN GAS BLAST

Former Local Man Victim
Of Pittsburgh Mishap

John Robert McLane, 26, son of Matthew J. McLane, formerly of East Liverpool, died in St. John's hospital in Pittsburgh Monday afternoon from burns received when a gasoline barge exploded at the Neville Island dock of the Gulf Refining Co. near Pittsburgh. A fellow worker, William Kurtz, 43, of McKees Rocks, Pa., who was also burned, died Monday morning.

The barge was being loaded with 390,000 gallons of gasoline when other employees heard a muffled explosion, followed by fire which swept the boat. McLane leaped into the river and Kurtz, attempting to clamber onto the dock, fell into the water, after being burned.

Besides his parents, McLane leaves a brother, James P. McLane. Funeral services will be held tonight at 8 in the John H. Slater chapel, 228 Brownsville road, Mt. Oliver, Pa. The body will be taken to Toledo for burial Wednesday. Miss Josie E. McLane of Denver street, an aunt, will attend the funeral services.

Railroad Sued

COLUMBUS, July 16.—Hubert E. Tomlinson, 17, sought $75,100 from the Pennsylvania railroad in a suit filed yesterday in the Franklin county courts. He charged false arrest and maltreatment by agents investigating a wreck of one of the railroad's passenger trains in suburban Linden, last Dec. 27. Tomlinson's father, V. V. Tomlinson, and his grandfather, Hubert Lindsey, are serving terms in Ohio penitentiary for murder in connection with the death of three trainmen of the wreck.

PROCESSING AND FLOOR TAXES RULED ILLEGAL IN U. S. COURT

DAVEY ORDERS BUDGET CHANGE TO MEET CUTS

Governor Will Submit New Appropriation Bill To Legislature

SOUNDS VETO THREAT

Promises to Kill Measure
If It Shows Increases
Over Minimum

By The Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, July 16.—Gov. Davey opened an attack on Ohio's financial dilemma today by instructing heads of all state divisions to revise promptly biennial budget estimates.

The executive's $8,800,000 veto slash to reduce the appropriations to $87,000,000 precipitated a crisis in state operations when his plan to transfer funds from one division to another struck a legal barrier.

Davey said he would submit a new appropriation bill to a special session of the general assembly in the fall.

He informed department heads, chairmen of commissions and presidents of state educational institutions, however, he would "veto the new appropriation bill in its entirety if it shows any increases."

Sees No Difficulty
"If you will readjust your budgets promptly and proceed to spend money out of each fund accordingly, no one will have any serious difficulty," Davey stated.

Two Republican members of the state control board—Auditor Joseph T. Tracy and Attorney General John W. Bricker—blocked the administration's plan to have the board make the transfers.

Their contention that the board was without such authority was upheld by the supreme court. Explaining his transfer plan, the governor said, "this would not have happened except for the unfavorable decision of the supreme court," and added "partisan opposition was the cause of the difficulty."

"The governor can not increase or decrease items," he added. "Therefore, I could not make a reduction of a certain percentage. All that I could do, in order to bring about the reduction, was to select a group of items which represented the desired savings."

Cites Long Practice
"I relied upon the clear provisions of the law—that transfers could be made from one fund to another. This practice has been followed for about 20 years and it has been the custom for the board of control in the past to cooperate in carrying out the purpose of the vetoes, under the broad powers granted. x x"

All state divisions affected by the reductions face curtailment of vital services such as telephone service and fuel unless the financial problem is solved.

Trustees of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans home at Xenia said that because of the budget slashes they would suspend indefinitely admission of additional children to the institution.

The budget reduction of $1,266,500 for Ohio State university drew fire from the Ohio State University Monthly, an alumni publication, which asserted the governor left agencies where the plums of patronage grew the thickest untouched, while the universities, public welfare and humanitarian activities of the state were mutilated under an ax which was swung while the governor's eyes were apparently closed.

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., July 16.—The Duke of Kent lost his shirt today playing golf against his elder brother, the Prince of Wales.

The two princes met on the links at Hayling Island before the jubilee naval review. Wales was in good form and Kent was losing. The latter peeled off his shirt and the game went on. They quit two holes short with Kent far down and with little time left to get to the review.

Then Kent went back after his shirt. It was gone.

East Liverpool Watches Eclipse Of Moon Despite Swirling Fog

Lunar Body Shines Copper-colored From Refracted
Rays Caused By Earth's Shadow

East Liverpool and the tri-state district Monday night joined with the nation in witnessing the total eclipse of the moon—the first in eight years. The longest visible eclipse in 50 years, scientists declare it will be a half century before another of such length will occur.

The moon, totally obscured by the earth, shone copper-colored from refracted rays in a celestial spectacle that held the attention of virtually the entire city despite a thick, swirling fog that arose suddenly from the Ohio river.

The phenomenon came with direct alignment of sun, earth and moon, the moon sliding through the earth's umbral cone, which extends 860,000 miles into space at a point approximately 226,000 miles away. The moon touched the penumbra, in which part of the sun's light is cut off, at 9:15 p. m., East Liverpool time, and reached the umbra, or totally dark shadow, at 10:12 p. m.

By 11:09 it was in total eclipse, emerging from the other side of the thick cone an hour and 40 minutes later, and clearing the penumbra at 2:35 a. m.

The refracted rays from the sun which gave the eclipsed moon a pale phosphorescent copper color and made it still visible, were bent around and directed into the earth's umbra by vaporous substances about the earth's surface.

Seaboard Has Favored Seats
The Atlantic seaboard had favored seats for the show, since the middle of the eclipse was only slightly past its meridian. In some regions rain and clouds made visibility impossible. Astronomers at the naval observatory in Washington made many photographs of the spectacle, but made no effort to check their time instruments. The haze with the earth's shadow made accurate observation impossible.

Harvard university scientists were handicapped by the clouds. They were not even able to take pictures. Scientists at Yerkes observatory in Wisconsin said their observations showed no changes in the craters on the moon's surface since the last eclipse.

UPSHAW SPEAKS HERE ON FRIDAY

Former Congressman Plans
Three Addresses in City
And One in Lisbon

William David Uphaw of Atlanta, Ga., former member of congress and prohibition party candidate for President in 1932, will make four addresses in Columbiana county, three of them in East Liverpool, Friday and Sunday.

Arrangements for the engagements were made Monday by Prescott Gilliam of Columbus, state organizer for the prohibition party. Uphaw will speak at a union service in the First Methodist Episcopal church Friday at 8 p. m., again at the First United Presbyterian church Sunday at 11 a. m. and at the Free Methodist campground in the Dixonville road Sunday at 3 p. m. He also is scheduled to address a union meeting in the Lisbon Christian church Sunday at 8 p. m.

Uphaw, sometimes called "the Abe Lincoln of the South" represented the Atlanta district in the lower branch of congress for eight years. The nationally known southerner will speak on the following subjects during his county visit: "Building a New America," "The Blue Coat and the Red Flag," "America's Greatest Battles" and "Christian Citizenship On the Job."

He addressed large audiences in Struthers and Youngstown over the week-end. From Columbiana county he will go to Steubenville for a series of meetings in Jefferson county. He began his speaking campaign in Ohio on July 4.

CHESTER TURNS DOWN NEW LIGHT CONTRACT

Councilmanic Proposal For
76 Lamps Is Rejected

A proposal by Councilmen Percy Willison and Farrell Pinney that the city enter into a contract with the Monongahela-West Penn Public Service Corp. for 76 street lights instead of the lamps now in service was rejected by the Chester council Monday night.

Councilmen Joseph Davis, Albert Kell and Henry Obermann opposed the proposed new contract which would have brought the street lighting bill within the $1,748 available this year. The bill for 109 lights totals $2,500 annually.

The Chester lawmakers notified the utility to turn off all street lights on Tuesday, July 2, but the company continued service.

Street lights burned in New Cumberland Monday night despite the orders of the town council to discontinue service July 15. The council, a few months ago, turned off 40 of the 82 lights, reducing the bill to $1,000 annually, but the new council said the levy will not provide sufficient funds for 32 lamps.

STORM DAMAGES COUNTY SANDUSKY, July 16.—Wind and hail, slicing through Erie county yesterday, battered down wheat, oats and corn and caused extensive damage to fruit and vegetable crops.

DECISION GIVEN ON APPEAL OF AAA TEST CASE

OHIO CASES PENDING

Federal Attorneys Plan To Carry Adverse Action
To Highest Tribunal

By The Associated Press.
BOSTON, July 16.—The United States circuit court of appeals held unconstitutional today the processing and floor taxes imposed under the agricultural adjustment act.

The court found that no such authority to impose taxes had been delegated to the secretary of agriculture by the Constitution or by decisions of the Supreme Court.

A similar question has been raised in several suits now pending in Ohio to prevent collection of processing taxes. The decision was handed down in the case of the Hoosac mills which had challenged the constitutionality of the processing tax and which appealed to the circuit court from an unfavorable decision by Federal Judge Elisha H. Brewster.

The Hoosac Mills receivers had asked recovery of $81,694 paid in taxes under the AAA. The decision was subscribed to by Judges Scott Wilson and George F. Morris. Judge George H. Bingham, senior justice, dissented.

Infringes on States' Rights
"It is clear," said the decision, "that the main purpose of the act, 'to control and regulate the production of the so-called basic agricultural commodities of the several states, through agreements with the producers and in consideration of what is termed rental or benefit payments, to reduce acreage or production for market sufficient to increase the current average price of such products to that elusive point where the returns to the farmer from the production of such commodities will purchase under present conditions the same amount of industrial products that the returns to the farmer from the same products would buy in the five-year pre-war period from July 1909 to Aug. 1914. x x x"

"The power of congress to regulate interstate commerce does not authorize it to do so by taxing products either of agriculture or industry before they enter interstate commerce, or otherwise to control their production merely because their production may indirectly affect interstate commerce."

Not Administrative
"This issue is not, as the government contends, whether congress can appropriate funds raised by general taxation for any purpose deemed by congress in furtherance of the 'general welfare,' but whether congress has any power to control or regulate matters left to the states and lay a special tax for that purpose."

The court also set forth that "the power to determine what the law shall be, what property shall be affected by taxation or regulation, and what standards shall govern the administrative officers in administering acts of congress, has never been held to be an administrative function. . . ."

"If congress has the power to control or regulate the production of agricultural products within the several states, and assess a tax on their processing or sale for that purpose, it is obviously legislative in character."

Justice Department Plans To Make Prompt Appeal

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 16.—Prompt appeal to the supreme court of the adverse ruling of the constitutional appeal of processing taxes by a circuit court of appeals at Boston was promised today by justice department lawyers.

Pending an opportunity to study the decision, AAA officials declined comment. Previously government attorneys had said the case would be appealed regardless of the ruling, and that a final decision on constitutionality of the AAA and the processing taxes was expected "before Christmas."

Attorney General Cummings and lawyers in his tax division said the Hoosac case probably would control more than 150 other suits now on file in various federal courts attacking the processing taxes and asking refunds and injunctions against payments.

They had predicted there would be little activity on these cases pending the supreme court ruling. Benefit payments to millions of farmers and nearly a billion dollars in collected taxes are involved.

ELECTION BOARD ADDS 500 NAMES TO VOTER LISTS

Electors Hurry to Qualify Under New Registration Rules For Primaries

TOTAL ROLL NOW 9,500

Preparations Made Here For Issuance of Ballots To Absentees in County

With the deadline reached Monday night for enrollment in East Liverpool under the amended registration law, Clerk John W. Moore of the Columbiana county board of election today estimated 500 names had been added to the qualified list of voters who expect to exercise the right of suffrage at the Republican and Democratic primaries here Aug. 13.

Scores of new voters were registered, while many transfers were issued to electors who have changed their place of residence since the November balloting.

Additions to the rolls increased the total to 9,500, it was indicated. Many of the registrants reported were voters who had disqualified themselves by failing to go to the polls at two consecutive November elections. Under the permanent

Election board officials today were prepared to issue ballots under the absent voter's law which permits an absentee to exercise his suffrage privilege 30 days before election day, if he or she will make affidavit of absence from the city on Aug. 13.

Under the law for special elections, ballots for persons who expect to be absent from their home precinct in Wellsville on Aug. 5, when an election will be held on the question of city manager, with a recall proviso as a secondary proposal, will not be available until 10 days before voting day.

WEST VIRGINIA GIRL'S BODY TO BE RETURNED

Attempts to Find Fame in Movies End in Death

LOS ANGELES, July 16. — The body of Julia Ann Graham, the one-time choir singer who sought fame and found death in Hollywood, was ready to be sent back to her home in Sistersville, W. Va., today.

The lifeless, unclad form of the 22-year-old actress-singer was found yesterday in the apartment of Benjamin Reynolds, movie cameraman. There was a bullet wound in the left temple. Police marked it down as a suicide and planned no inquest. It was her third—and last—attempts to die since she came to Hollywood seeking a motion picture career.

The first time was in March, 1934, when she became discouraged over her chances of succeeding, and swallowed poison. Emergency treatment saved her, and Earl Carroll, New York producer, then in Hollywood, gave her a bit in a picture he made.

REGISTRATIONS RISE

Producers of Chinaware And Semi-Porcelain Book- ing Orders For Fall

Six East Liverpool district pottery firms have exhibits in the annual house furnishing show which will close at the Pennsylvania hotel in New York City Friday.

The exhibitors include the Hall China and C. C. Thompson Pottery companies of East Liverpool; Homer Laughlin and Edwin M. Knowles China companies of Newell and the Taylor, Smith & Taylor and Harker Pottery companies of Chester.

Registrations at this year's event, which is similar to the annual glass and pottery exposition which is held in Pittsburgh in January, were reported 25 to 35 percent greater than in 1934.

New York dispatches said that stores, which have been out of the market during the last two months, have placed heavy orders for pottery products to be delivered early in the fall.

Buyers also are expected to place requirements for merchandise for delivery for the Christmas holidays.

standard, set up in the act for determining when the secretary shall pay rental or benefit payments in order to reduce production of any particular commodity except in his own judgment as to what will effectuate the purpose of the act.

The declaration of the emergency in the agricultural act contains no such standard for the secretary of agriculture to follow in entering into restrictive agreement with producers of agricultural products. It is merely a statement of conditions, which in the judgment of congress warranted legislative action.

"Without requiring any findings to warrant his action, congress has empowered him, in conjunction with the producers, to determine when a reduction of acreage or production of any one of the agricultural commodities which it has termed basis should be resorted to to accomplish the act, when rental or benefit payments are to be made and in what amounts, and thereby to determine through the initiation of the benefit payments or rentals the consequent imposition of a tax. "The secretary made no findings of facts as to why he selected the first list of basis commodities for reducing acreage or production, and was not required to do so. He simply made a proclamation; rental and or benefit payments are to be made with respect to cotton; and a processing tax automatically followed."

Mrs. Margaret Berg

Mrs. Margaret Needham Berg, wife of Conrad Berg, formerly of East Liverpool, died Monday in a Pittsburgh hospital after a brief illness. She was employed at Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh and made her home in Rochester, Pa.

Besides her husband, she leaves two sons, Forrest of Rochester, and Delton of Beaver; a daughter, Margaret, of Rochester, Pa., and one brother, Wallace Needham of Cleveland.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 1:30 p. m. at the home of the son at 474 Reno street, Rochester. Burial will be made there.

James A. Dawson

James A. Dawson, 76, a native of Ohio township, Beaver county, Pa., died Monday at his home in Ovid, Colo., after a long illness.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Linda Barclay Dawson, he leaves one daughter, Mrs. Mary Engleker of Ovid, and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Ramsey of East Liverpool. One grandson also survives.

Burial will be made in Ovid.

WITNESSES REVEAL PROMISE OF VOTES

Testify Brewster Pledged To Get G. O. P. Support

By The Associated Press. WASHINGTON, July 16.—Testimony that Rep. Brewster (R) of Maine expressed the opinion he could obtain 25 Republican votes in the house for the provision in the utilities bill to abolish "unnecessary" holding companies was received today by the house rules committee.

This was given by Representatives Rankin (D) of Mississippi and Maverick (D) of Texas to the committee named by the house to investigate lobbying for and against the utilities bill.

Brewster later voted against the abolition provision desired by President Roosevelt. He precipitated the lobby investigation by asserting Thomas G. Corcoran, RFC attorney, threatened to stop construction of the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project in Maine unless the representative supported the President.

Rankin also repeated to the committee charges that his telephone wires were tapped during considerations of the utilities bill in the house.

He said he turned the information over to the justice department and to the communications commission.

"And keep in mind," he suggested, "that the telephone companies were working right in with the power interests against this bill."

Asked what he meant in earlier statements that the records of congressmen should be searched, Rankin replied:

"Just what I said, if we are going to get to the bottom of this, I'm willing to have mine searched right now."

SEARCH FOR LAND OF FREE DENIED

Yale Sociologist Declares Caste System of the Old World Guided Colony

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 16.—Prof. James G. Leyburn, Yale sociologist, has shattered the popular belief that the Puritan leaders were chiefly concerned with establishing equality when they founded the Massachusetts Bay colony.

"Instead of throwing off the be-draggled garments of Europe and starting life afresh in the wilderness, they liked many of them and tried to keep them even when they were in rags," he revealed in a study of pioneers.

"When a group of people leave an old and settled country to start life again upon the frontier," he wrote, "they ordinarily do not wish to give up all their accustomed and familiar ways. On the contrary, they wish to keep as much as they can of the old civilization, merely changing those parts of it which seemed to them disadvantageous."

"To the Puritan leaders there was a natural aristocracy composed of the clergymen and the small group of 'gentlemen' who stood squarely with the clergy in this theocracy. This new land, they held, should be ruled only by God's elect. Early magistrates came from this class. Students at Harvard were listed and seated, not in alphabetical order, but according to their 'dignities.'"

"Merchants and traders ranked next to the aristocrats, and after these the skilled laborers, generally freeholders, who did most of the work of society. Many of them secured a vote by meeting property qualifications."

Next in order Prof. Leyburn listed unskilled workers, indentured servants, Negroes and Indians.

"These class distinctions," he said, "were carried out in the allotment of town lands, of church pews and even the work of establishing the new settlements on the frontier. Various other practices were based upon them: the punishment of whipping was not administered to the gentry; titles of master and mistress were accorded to them only; women of the lower class could not wear silk unless their husbands were worth 200 pounds."

"The whole tradition was against democracy—and yet it prevailed."

GIRL'S SCREAM ROUTS TRIO OF KIDNAPERS

Freed After Cries Arouse Members Of Household

PORTLAND, Ore., July 16. — Nelva McCrary, 13, unnered her captors by her screams and was released early today after she was seized in her bedroom and carried away in an automobile by three men, police reported.

Patrolmen Cliff Miller and Ferdinand Gaunt said the girl reported she bit through her gag and started screaming so loud that her captors fled.

She was found by W. W. Waller, one of the neighbors who heard her terrified cries when she was taken from her bedroom shortly before midnight. Waller and others had joined the search. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCrary, also reported hearing her scream before she disappeared.

State Tax Commission Asks Approval by PWA Board

Special To The Review.

EAST PALESTINE, O., July 16.—Approval of the PWA must be obtained before a state tax commission will permit the submission of a $20,000 bond issue to electors here for modernization of the municipality's sewage system, council was advised Monday night.

Solicitor E. L. Lyon reported that the tax commission's stand. The proposed improvements will cost $25,000, of which the PWA will provide $15,000 and the city $20,000.

Council, in adjourned session Friday night, will act upon a resolution to submit the bond issue at the Aug. 13 primary election. In the meantime, approval of the project will be sought from the PWA.

Service-Safety Director Herbert Lemley reported that two relief projects, the Walnut street improvement and the water line extensions had been halted upon orders from Lisbon throwing about 90 men out of employment.

CROWDING SEEN IN HIGH SCHOOL AT WELLSVILLE

Additional Rooms Required
For Enrollment of 560
Pupils in Fall

RENTAL PLAN STUDIED

WPA Funds May Be Sought
To Erect Annex if Stadium Aid is Granted

Wellsville school officials today studied plans for coping with congestion in the high school next fall, when an enrollment of more than 560 pupils is predicted by Supt. S. E. Daw.

The school chief pointed out that additional rooms will be needed in order to provide quarters for the increased registration which will be augmented as a result of mid-year promotions. The latter group will number 75.

Board of education members said they will consider a plan to rent outside quarters to house the additional pupils. It is probable commercial students will be assigned to the rented school, thus providing two additional rooms in the high school building.

It was indicated an expansion program is necessary in order to relieve the situation. The board has prepared tentative plans for the erection of an addition to the high school building, providing works progress administration funds are obtainable. The program, however, will be held in abeyance until final action is taken at Washington on the application for a $45,000 grant for the construction of a stadium at Nicholson field, the high school sports center.

Threat of hot tar and feathers failed to cool the love of Julius Switzer, 60, for his 86-year-old widow wife, the former Mrs. Sarah King, of Cory, Pa. When the Cory townsfolk, 500 strong, irate over the man's marriage to the widow, drove a truck up to the couple's home loaded with hot tar and then proceeded to hurl stones through the windows, the couple fled to Erie, Pa. Resentment against the marriage was aggravated by the slaying of Lawrence Field, 39. Police have held Guy King, the new Mrs. Switzer's son, in connection with the slaying on the grounds that King had mistakenly killed Field instead of Switzer, the man he didn't want to marry his mother.

MAYOR WILL OUTLINE PWA POWER PLANS

plants, even where the city bears the entire cost of construction, and where the interest rates are considerably higher, shows a consistent record of profitable operation. For instance our neighboring city of Martins Ferry issued their annual statement July 1, showing a profit of $38,510 for the year. We feel that if our city is ever to have a municipal plant the prospect for success is much brighter at the present time when our government is offering an outright gift of almost half the cost of the project. The need for added revenues for our city cannot be denied.

"An analysis of Mr. Loftus' figures indicates that at 10 percent less than our present tariff and on the supposition of securing 75 percent of the consumers, the gross annual revenue to the city would be approximately $252,000. A conservative estimate of the annual generating, transmission and distribution and office costs indicates that $95,000 yearly would be ample. The bond retirement would require yearly payments of approximately $52,000. This leaves an annual surplus of $101,000.

"The continued successful operation of our municipal water plant would indicate that a light plant could be equally as successful.

The proposed plant could be operated in conjunction with the water plant at a considerable saving to both.

Cost Is Explained

"The total cost of the project is estimated at $1,500,000. This figure includes all generating, transmission and distribution, etc., and also provides sufficient money for a white way system in the downtown and the Mulberry street section of East End. The present plan is to place all wiring in underground conduits in the downtown business section, looking to the eventual elimination of all overhead wiring in the business portions of the city. Ample standby capacity is provided so that the possibility of breakdowns is at a minimum.

"The legislation called for at the present time authorizes the board of control to make application to the PWA for the loan and grant, and does not bind the city in any manner whatever. Additional legislation, all of it subject to referendum, will be needed before a contract can be entered into with the government. It is our thought that the people should be given the opportunity of expressing an opinion on the proposal, and that a referendum on the legislation would be the logical way. In the meantime the legislation asked for at this time would clear the way for a concrete proposal and allow definite figures to be made available."

More small trout "planted" by the government in streams are killed by other fish than by the big birds commonly believed to be the fish's worst enemy.

Menaces.

From the beginning of the depression it has been assumed that sooner or later the whole thing would be figured out by the economists. Even if they couldn't fix anything, they would know what needed fixing.

They've been a little disappointing, because they disagree so much. A good many skeptics have begun to hint that the thing is too big for the feeble brain of man to comprehend. Economists are like the blind man touch a elephant. They know only that which can be perceived by direct touch.

It's heartening, therefore, to read that the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, as represented by George B. Chandler at a house ways and means committee hearing on the new tax bill, knows precisely why the United States isn't recovering from the depression. There are six "major menaces that hang over the country like a black cloud."

One is President Roosevelt's tax plan. Another is rubber stamp legislating. The third is government in business. The fourth is destruction of states' rights. The fifth is creation of a "race of mendicants, loafers and weaklings through abuse of relief and sentimental social legislation." The last is hostility to the Constitution and hatred of the supreme court.

The thing to do, therefore, is to scatter these black clouds and the depression will be over. Fortunately, it isn't quite so silly as it sounds, because the six menaces named by the Ohio Chamber are nothing more or less than symptoms, and if you could get rid of all the symptoms the chances are 10 to 1 you could get rid of the disease, too.

The Key.

When a state begins to be called the key to an international situation by diplomats, its future is bound to be the opposite of rosy. That has been Austria's predicament since the Treaty of Versailles, and the predicament is getting worse.

At the close of last week, its chancellor, Kurt Schuschnigg and his family, were in a bad automobile wreck. The chancellor's wife was killed. It's reasonable to say such accidents, when they occur to important officials, justify the suspicion of an attempt at assassination.

Geographical position makes it a buffer state. It must be independent, but not too independent. That is to say, it must not join hands with Germany, nor must it try to retain the territory it lost in the settlement of the World war.

If it were allied with Germany, Chancellor Hitler would dominate central Europe from the North and Baltic seas to the frontiers of Italy and the Slav states. The powers of Europe will not let that happen. At the moment, however, there is greater danger from another possibility.

A Hapsburg restoration seems to be in the making. While the Allied powers might like to see a dummy emperor in Austria as a means of preventing union with Germany, the brawling governments of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania, created from the wreckage of Austria's pre-war territory, would need a lot of pacifying.

All in all, Austria is a country that will bear watching by persons who have a nose for trouble and a dramatic sense which enables them to watch trouble in the making without wanting to get out of their seats on the aisle and help the hero dispose of the villain.

Proving What Can Happen

In 1894 Alfred Dreyfus, a brilliant young Jewish officer attached to the French war ministry, was convicted on a charge of betraying military secrets to Germany. Twelve years later he was absolved. Last Saturday, at the age of 75, his death recalled the famous Dreyfus case.

Alfred Dreyfus was the victim of a judicial error—an error deliberately plotted by men who hated him and his race. It proved to enlightened Frenchmen and to believers in impartial justice everywhere that constant vigilance is the price of fairness in government. The case has been employed many times since 1894 to prove what can happen when bureaucracy and the machinery of justice become intolerably corrupt.

A few courageous souls endangered themselves to undo the wrong which they knew had been committed against Capt. Dreyfus. Tirelessly, they traced down the forgery, perjury and faked evidence which were the tools of the young captain's destruction. For their pains they were imprisoned and abused. Finally, their relentless energy in behalf of justice prevailed, and Capt. Dreyfus was absolved.

Their victory did not make government perfect, but it did demonstrate one effective way to correct an injustice perpetrated by corrupt officials—publication of the facts against them. There still are Dreyfus cases, but under governments which have been denied the right to strangle free expressions of opinion there are no Dreyfus cases for which corrupt and immoral officials are not made to pay and relatively few in which justice is not administered eventually.

One of Those Things.

The Lion of Idaho roared last week. Maybe this week, when the fearsome echoes have faded, someone will explain what enemy came into his line of vision. A few, who obviously are not among his admirers, believe Sen. Borah roared simply because he was hungry.

"The political party which would make an issue of constitutional government and at the same time seek the Supreme Court for political leadership would reveal either gross indifference to what constitutes constitutional government, or a willingness to sacrifice its most vital principle for party advantage," he warned.

Everybody knows the names of Justice Roberts and Justice Stone have been mentioned in connection with the Republican presidential nomination. So, for that matter, has the name of Chief Justice Hughes, but Sen. Borah referred to only two members of the court. He and Justice Hughes haven't spoken since the senate fight over confirmation of the Hughes appointment.

It would seem, therefore, Sen. Borah was trying to nip some political strategy in the bud. The confusing thing about it is that both Justice Roberts and Justice Stone are known to have told friends they would refuse the nomination under any circumstances, a fact with which Sen. Borah could have acquainted himself without blurring out his rage. The more one thinks about it, the more likely it seems the gentleman from Idaho was merely hungry—for attention. Some say he might be the Republican nominee himself.

Mud Pie.

It's plain as day that if the investigation into the efforts made by utilities to block the so-called death clause in the Wheeler-Rayburn bill strikes dirt, the power trust will be smeared with a mud pie. Thereupon, congressmen who voted against the administration would be in a bad spot. It would look as though they had been influenced unduly by the utilities lobby, and that happens to be part of the administration's strategy.

The matter rests, therefore, on a proper definition of "dirt." If the investigators were to discover that, say, a million dollars had been spent to fight the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, would that be dirt? Undoubtedly, it would be designated as such by utility baiters, but would they be right?

It costs money to start a wave of public opinion. The utilities lobby circularized the country. It caused congressmen to receive thousands of telegrams from holders of utility securities. That much of its campaign was in the open. Was there another side, perhaps? Is it possible the utilities lobby may have applied pressure on individual congressmen, as the administration apparently did?

That kind of lobbying is old-fashioned, besides being sure to make enemies whenever it's disclosed. The new way is to make constituents put or pressure in the form of telegrams and letters. Besides being safer it's infinitely more effective.

Worth Watching

A convention to be called in the fall will launch for the approval of voters in the United States a third party, according to advance notices. The idea was approved at Chicago in the recent meeting of about 300 representatives of radical organizations.

That should be a launching worth watching. Theoretically, if all the left-wingers were to get together and stick together, there would be enough radical strength to swing a national election. But how can radicals be made to stick together?

The Socialist party in the United States has been hamstringed for years by inability to agree on the question of cooperating with other radical groups. Socialists are interested in socialization of industry. Wisconsin Progressives and Minnesota's Farm-Labor groups are interested in more immediate issues.

Where would Upton Sinclair's EPIC disciples stand in a radical coalition? What would be done with the Communists? Who would be able to pacify the Townsend planners? Maybe the gentlemen who are planning to ride triumphantly on the crest of a third party movement know, but it's more likely they're just hoping for a lucky break.

Probably, it's lucky for the radicals they can't agree. It keeps them from losing that freshness of viewpoint which makes them radicals. By always anticipating their day of glory, they are saved from the disappointment of realization. Their third party movement will buoy their hopes through the summer, regardless of what happens to it next fall.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 16.—George W. Tryon is a snow-white-haired Kyle Bellow looking veteran advertising man now in his field and along Broadway as a Brummel. For 30 years his smart sartorial effects have been remarked around Times Square, a region noted for swank.

Yet Tryon, despite his fastidious appearance, probably spends less on dress than many laborers on the Bowery. In days when the expense of dressing is a strain on almost every purse, the effects he achieves—and how he achieves them—are worthy of chronicle.

He is fond of light colors and usually has a wardrobe of six suits and two top coats. Aside from a dinner outfit. The highest price he paid for any one is $17.50. Some as low as $13.95. He has a commanding figure, but his secret lies in effective shopping. Hunting out odd lot bargains.

He has 25 shirts, collars attached, none of which cost more than 50 cents save for a few French percale for 65 cents each for socks and wears rayon union suits at 65. All purchases are made at miscellaneous shops, no two at the same.

Especially literature of the fancy waistcoat verbiage, with metaphors and phrases all bejeweled with such as Fannie Hurst or Achmed Abdullah turn out in more fanciful moments.

Manhattan Interlude: It was near Gracie Square. A little girl of 4 and her nurse were almost run over by a truck, charging hell bent. In her terror the child dropped her doll and that ten-ton camion's wheels crushed it as flat as a ginger-bread man. But it wasn't the little girl's heart broken sobs that touched the bystanders. It was the indescribable look on the face of a fat man without a collar, who looked at her and at the doll and dabbed his eyes with a dirty rag of a handkerchief.

Someone sends me what Jesse Lynch Williams said in an obituary blurb for the late Harvey O'Higgins: "He hadn't an enemy in the world." And underneath it the sender scribbled: "Carve not that upon my gravestone, O, simple flatterer!"

The only American newspaperman I have known to join the monacle wearers is Forest Wilson, although lately he has deserted the news shops for roaming assignments with Cosmopolitan. He picked up the single eyeglass custom during his London days when an astigmatism bothered and an oculist proved a monacle relieved it better than regular spectacles.

I nurse a secret admiration that most men hide with outward contempt for the monacle. No article of adornment has ever attained its side. A Bond street tailor once told me the most perfectly dressed men in England and on the continent were monacles. He explained they were constantly compelled to "dress up to it." A monacle will not blend with slovenly attire. New York once had, before he went to Hollywood, the most accomplished monacle wearer is Andreas de Segura of the Metropolitan opera. Achmed Abdullah, mentioned above, is some shakes with the monacle and Sinclair Lewis in festive moments carries one with which he does a slick bit of mimicry of a vacuous, haw-haw Briton that is side splitting. Figaro in Paris has six reporters who sport monacles and half the London reportorial staffs are so adorned.

Another Wilson Mizner yarn. He was invited to dine with a lady of the nouveaux riches in Palm Beach whose home was one of the outstanding extravaganzas of the boom. As he stepped into a drawing room whose side suggested the Grand Central rotunda, he exclaimed: "What, no red caps?"

The Cost of Washington's Voyage

Interpreters hired by Washington for his exploring trip down the Ohio in 1770 seemed to have been poorly paid considering the hardship and dangers of travel. Washington paid Joseph Nichols only five pounds, eight shillings—about $26. Two Indians were paid 10 pounds and 13 shillings jointly.

Washington bought supplies and food costing 10 pounds, 19 shillings and two pence from the commissary department of Fort Pitt. Exclusive of game food, it appeared that the party was sustained on the voyage for about 15 cents a day. As they found only Indian villages along the river, and but few of them, it is not likely they made any further purchases.

The new generation knows nothing of chain-letters. It never sent a request for a three-day leave, via military channels to Headquarters, A. E. F.—Tacoma Ledger.

WILL ROGERS SAYS:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 16.—Pat Hurley called up last night. Remember Pat, secretary of war during the time when we had no trouble with the Constitution but had it with everything else.

Well, sir, there was a cheerful, and in fact an arrogant ring in Pat's voice. You know Republicans' voices are changing, they are not whispering any more. You meet one now and he hollers across the street. "Hello, Hello, did you know that our free American institutions are in greater danger today than ever before? Did you know that our Constitution is in jeopardy? Did you know they are going to take our Rolls Royce away from us and make us ride in a mere Cadillac?"

"Did you know that six months ago there wasn't a Republican presidential candidate in a carload, and now there is over a million? Happy days are here again."

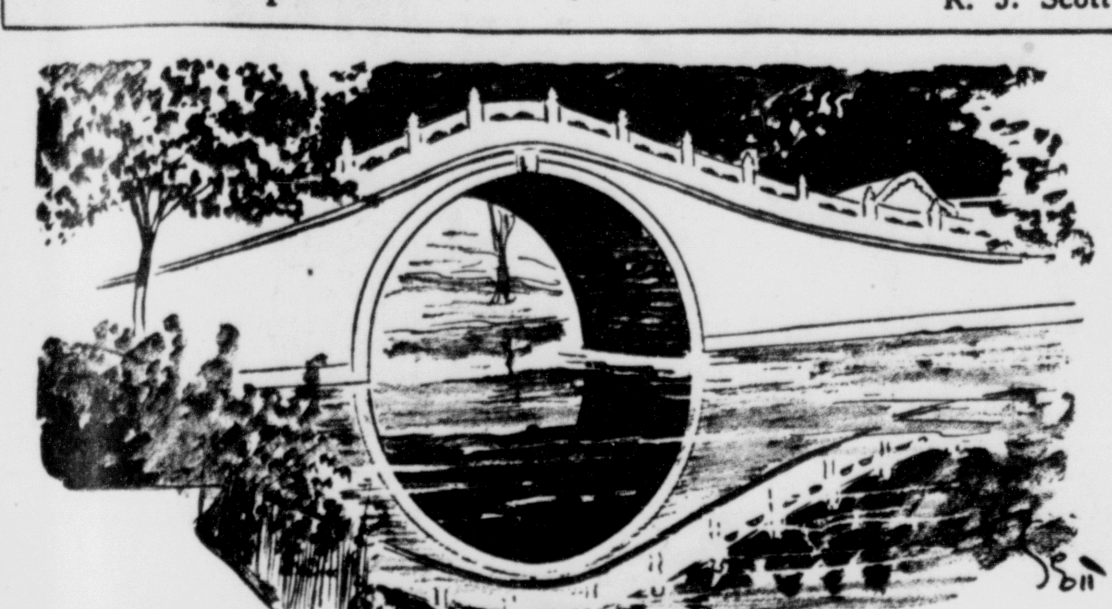

Yours,

Behind the News IN WASHINGTON AND WALL STREET

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The heads you see on the brows of congressmen these days are not due entirely to the weather, but to a certain political heat wave. Excellent cooling systems at the capitol are not adequate to combat the record temperatures being raised by the senate committee investigating the utilities lobby.

The basic motive behind that investigation has not been a secret. The new deal congressional board of strategy decided more or less openly that the only way to save its original Wheeler-Rayburn bill, after the house defeat, was to dig up and broadcast the transgressions of the power people. It was arranged that Sen. Wheeler would delay the bill until the investigators had built a publicity backfire which would make it hot for those congressmen who opposed the new deal version of the bill.

The initial success of the endeavor has been more than the most enthusiastic new dealer expected.

Devastation

Anyone who has been watching congressmen closely the last few days could almost see a few of them wilt. The leading new dealers say that a dozen or more house members have already indicated a desire to change their votes, before the Turkish bath torture goes any further. However, at least 35 must change, if the new deal is to win. This will take some time, if indeed it can be accomplished at all.

The prospects were greatly enlivened by the strong majority rolled up in the house for the new deal TVA amendments last week. Every insider realized the swerving implications behind that vote.

Furthermore the power people themselves are glum. They do not know how to combat this sort of thing. One confessed mournfully a few days ago that he thought the jig was up; that it is only "a question of what congress will do to us."

Slip-Ups

What is helping the new deal game along is the fact that the power lobby, as usual, overplayed its hand in some instances. A typically idiotic incident is one which happened to Chairman Rayburn of the house committee in charge of the legislation. He has never told about it, but about a month ago he received over 100 letters from the small town of Denison, Tex., all of which were identical in wording and all urged him to defeat his own bill.

Rayburn acknowledged these letters and was surprised to find that 52 of his acknowledgements came back undelivered because the postman could find no such persons living at the addresses given. A check-up indicates that many of the names were those of persons no longer living, or who had moved away from town. Some were children, under voting age.

Intrigue

Ordinarily when the defendants are permitted to judge their own cases, you may expect a quick acquittal. But the congressmen who are investigating themselves to find out whether they have been unduly influenced by the power lobby or the President's lobby, are so excited over this issue that they are unsheathing knives against each other and eyeing each other's backs.

Intrigues and counter-intrigues have sprung up behind the investigations to an unprecedented extent.

For instance, some new deal congressmen in the house are cutting ground underneath the house investigators. They do not trust that inquiry entirely. Secretly they are digging up data against their colleagues and furnishing it to the senatorial investigators instead of to their own investigators. One congressman who is doing that asserts he has evidence indicating that some of his colleagues are on the payroll of utilities companies as attorneys. He promises to "rock the capitol."

A second congressman is trying to find proof that one of the house investigators has a brother in Maine for whom Congressman Brewster has been seeking a postmastership.

Vacation?

Some of President Roosevelt's political friends have been looking lately into the summer retirement of Father Coughlin from the political arena. They wonder whether it is just for the summer, or how long.

It is customary for the radio priest to stop broadcasting during the summer months. No suspicions were aroused by that. But you may recall that he started last spring on a campaign to speak at mass meetings in the 12 states with the largest votes. Only four such meetings were held. A fifth is planned at Chicago, where Father Coughlin is suing the park board to get Soldiers' Field.

NEW YORK, July 16.—All the confusion about whether President Roosevelt really wants a tax bill immediately leaves New York sharpshooting convinced of just one thing, that Roosevelt still knows his political oats. They figure his one clear purpose in all this fustian jockeying, is to earmark the tax issue as his own. If he can get the rich socked at this session in accordance with the plan he outlined—fine. If not, let it ride a while. In the latter case the question is sure to revive a little later. When it does it will be branded with the President's initials.

The philosophy of making the wealthy share more generously with Uncle Sam spikes Huey Long's guns more effectively than the Kingfish perhaps realizes, even though he rants about the inadequacy of the White House program. The idea is registered with the voters that the President favors the principle, and that's what counts.

And along with it he stakes a claim on the pet conservative issue of balancing the budget. They claim we must bolster the national credit. Okay, Roosevelt agrees with them. And even though they said it first the prestige of his office assures that he will get credit for the move in the popular mind.

Knows

You can see where this lands the Republicans. Their charge that the new deal is borrowing the country bankrupt is crammed back down their throats. It's hard to make a fight when you opponent insists on going along with you. What can they do about it? Come out for a much broader plan which will hit the smaller taxpayers? Sure, but when you start taxing voters it doesn't help your cause politically. Object to any new taxes? Then what about the precious balanced budget? Argue that levies on the wealthy alone are unfair and discriminatory? Even confirmed right-wingers realize that doesn't make political sense. It looks here as if the G. O. P. has been thrown for a loop no matter how it works out.

The President's tax maneuvers remind observers of the way he nailed down the constitutional amendment issue after the Supreme Court slew the NRA. In that case, as in this, he put his stamp on something that may become popular. If it does, it's his. If it doesn't, he needn't go further. Either way the opposition from both left and right is stranded on the outside looking in.

As usual New Yorkers remark that Roosevelt is certainly a master at spotting the political plums about to ripen and collecting them for his basket. They figure this faculty will keep a lot of rank-and-file Democrats lined up next year—no matter what party higher-ups think. The party hasn't had so many shots at the patronage food-box in recent years that it can lightly afford to lose a leader overboard who obviously knows so many tricks in the political trade.

The triumph scored by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's association and vice-president of the federation of labor, at his Association's meeting in New York was very important to conservative federation leaders in their fight to keep control of the organizer labor setup.

The longshoremen's unions contain a strong radical element whose main object in life is to oust Mr. Ryan and grab the reins for themselves. If they ever succeed it will be the signal for similar left wing uprisings in other labor groups, and perhaps the beginning of the end for the federation old guard. Conversely, if leftist longshoremen can't win inside their own organization there isn't much chance yet for radical upsets in other unions.

That's why Bill Green was on deck at the longshoremen's gathering to give his friend Ryan a hand. His own job was indirectly but definitely at stake. The results of the test were a pleasant surprise to the right-wingers, who had hoped to come out on top but hadn't dreamed they would win so decisively. Critical observers interpret this straw as indicating that the present federation leadership is more firmly in the saddle than anyone, including the leaders, realized, and that aggressive political action by labor, despite the drive by leftists inside and outside the federation, is at least several years away.

Independent

Bill Green's war on the communists in labor ranks is also turning out to have been a smart move. It's perfectly true, as Green alleges, that the Reds have fought the Wagner bill as strenuously as the hard-boiled industrialist. Why? Because if it works, the communist effort to infiltrate the unions is due for a decided setback. Red recruiting must have active discontent to feed on or it dies of anemia.

New York sources which have investigated carefully the report that a large majority of federation members evidently have faith in the Wagner bill as the quickest road to further gains. They are in no mood to tolerate attempts to sabotage it. Therefore Green's disclosure of communist tactics bags two bunnies with one brick. It emphasizes his co-hero role with Sen. Wagner as having been chiefly responsible for enactment of a popular piece of legislation. And it credits his most dangerous enemies, labor ranks by showing them up as deliberately trying to wreck labor's "greatest victory." Green has their own selfish ends. Green has substantially strengthened his position in the past couple of weeks.

That may or may not mean fewer strikes in the months to come. It does mean that the federation will maintain its traditional independence of politics and will continue to pursue its objectives on time-honored lines. That's good news for Roosevelt in 1936.

Dreams

Financial dreams were more amused than impressed by the prediction of Jean Tannery, governor of the Bank of France, that currency stabilization between France, Britain and the United States would soon be an accomplished fact.

Comment runs that Mr. Tannery must be addicted to pipe dreams. Of course France wants to stabilize but our government and England are as leery as ever of lashing themselves to the mast. Perhaps unofficial de facto arrangements can be worked out, but they won't be helped any by optimistic publicity.

Unanimous

Jesse Jones of the RFC recently visited New York to participate in conferences about railroad reorganizations. While here he let fall a crack to the effect that he wished the banks would get back in business, referring to the fact that credit refuses to expand despite the pressure of excess reserves. The banks would like Mr. Jones to know that they heartily reciprocate his wish. They don't find it any fun to do without earnings either.

Question of Property

OPINIONS VARY on the income taxing and partial inheritance "confiscating" plans for the new era. In Washington, Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein of New York, representing the conference of American rabbis, favors the legislation. Herbert Benjamin, another New Yorker, a Communist, says the whole program is "entirely inadequate to meet the social needs of the masses." He probably is right. "The social needs of the masses" could hardly be satisfied by confiscating everything that everybody in the United States has accumulated.

The United States Chamber of Commerce objects to the income and inheritance tax program, calls it confiscation. The question involved seems simple.

Does the property of the United States, results of thrift and intelligence, belong to the people that created it, or is it only held in trust by them for public use by those that, for the time being, exercise powers of government?

Russian Czars Ivan, Peter and others held that everything in Russia, including the life of every Russian, belonged to the czar; nobody questioned it. Louis the Fourteenth said everything belonged to him; he might temporarily allow it to remain in the hands of his subjects.

The American theory, until recently, was that what a man had acquired without violation of law, usually by working, was his property. He was to contribute his proportionate share of actual, reasonable costs of his government. It was not thought that he was to give half or 60 or 90 percent of his income during life, and as much as politicians might need after his death to finance new theories of government.

Whether that old theory is to be eliminated the next two or three years will decide. In any case it will be impossible to satisfy completely Herbert Benjamin, New York Communist. This is a rich country, but all the property put together wouldn't satisfy "the social needs of the masses" if the masses decide not to work.

A Crime Scenario

LET HOLLYWOOD scenario writers improve on this story that happened in Chicago: A woman, 44 years old, lost her married daughter. The husband and son-in-law announced plans to remarry. The dead wife's mother, according to police, hires for $500 a woman, "former burlesque chorus girl" now living with a Chinese, to murder her son-in-law. The young man was invited to visit his mother-in-law. The burlesque lady, was there. "We had two bottles of whiskey," she told police, "gave him four highballs, and he passed out."

The hired murderess then said to the mother-in-law: "Get out and leave the rest to me."

She held cotton soaked in ether under the drunken man's nose, fastened a cord around his neck, pulled it tight "until I was sure he was dead." Then she cut off his legs, which have not been found, put the rest of the body in a trunk which has been found.

The police believe that the mother-in-law, who paid for the murder, was in love with her son-in-law and wanted him to marry nobody else, or suspected that he had killed her daughter and wanted revenge. They are now hunting for the burlesque actress and the Chinese with whom she lived. That 1935 American crime makes Eugene Sorel's "Mysteries of Paris" seem tame.

Money For Italy

ITALY is said to seek a big war loan. Under the Johnson law, no loan can be raised in America. However, money can always be raised for war Italy could get money here, if our rich men were still rich and not afraid to spend what they have left. Italy could, under ordinary circumstances, sell works of art for 100 millions or 500 millions of dollars and hardly miss them.

Michael Angelo's "Moscos" would be cheap at $100,000,000, but that most magnificent of all statues now in the collection of Saint Peter in Chains, is, presumably, the property of the Catholic church. Italy's government has treasures innumerable that Americans would buy, if they had any money left. The Johnson law says nothing about buying pictures.

Many Substantial Gainers Although Leaders Hold To Narrow Range

By The Associated Press. NEW YORK, July 16.—Today's stock market was largely a specialty affair. While there were a number of substantial gainers during the early proceedings, most of the leaders held to a narrow range. Packard was an active performer following publication of its satisfactory earnings statement. One block of 13,000 shares of this issue changed hands at a fractional advance.

Union Pacific was up nearly 2 points and National Biscuit 1. Firmness also was shown by Kennecott, Anaconda, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Case, Montgomery Ward, American Telephone and Consolidated Gas. Call money renewed at 1/8 of 1 percent.

Observers said the market horizon was still cloudy in some sections. One bright spot was the record total motor truck sales scored in June. Registrations for that month were about 50,000. Increased farm income, better retail trade and improvement in some of the capital goods divisions were counted factors in the uptick by analysts.

The rise of $160,000,000 in reserve balances of federal reserve member banks in 91 cities was viewed as sympathetic of the continued accumulation of idle funds in banking centers.

ILLINOIS MOTHER GIVES BIRTH TO 16 CHILDREN IN 17 YEARS

Every year except one for the last 17 has seen an increase in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Swarrington of Wood River, Ill. Here is Mrs. Swarrington in bed with their 16th child, one-day-old Phyllis May. Swarrington is standing at the head of the bed while other children of the family are grouped around to see their baby sister. Ten of the children are alive. The family is on relief.

Prices were about a cent higher here early today, responsive largely to strength in the Liverpool market. An opening advance of more than a cent in wheat at Kansas City also attracted attention. Starting 8 1/4 cents higher, September 83 1/4, Chicago wheat later gained. Corn opened at 1 1/4 up, September 75 1/4, and then held close to this range.

MOTORISTS GET LIQUOR ADVICE

Warned to Get Familiarized With Legislation In Various States

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The American Automobile association has warned touring motorists to familiarize themselves with liquor regulations in various states. A considerable number of tourists "run into serious trouble" if they carry a nip or two as they travel, the organization said. "Motorists generally," the association said, "appear to assume that the repeal of the federal prohibition amendment restored John Barleycorn to good standing before the law everywhere. Not only is this assumption unwarranted, but much confusion exists even in those states where liquor has been legalized."

As a result of a continued high record of automobile fatalities and accidents, it was explained, "transportation of liquor in automobiles even in 'wet' territory involves serious risks and should be avoided. The tendency almost everywhere is to press charges of driving while under the influence of liquor and to impose heavier penalties."

In dry states, violations such as transportation of liquor call for severe penalties, fines, jail sentences and confiscation of cars. Sales of liquor have been legalized through license or state stores in 39 states. Seven states have banned sales. They are: Alabama, Georgia, Kansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Texas.

Two states, Florida and North Carolina, "are partly wet and partly dry," depending on the county. In Alaska, District of Columbia, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, sales have been legalized under license, while in the Panama Canal Zone, manufacture and sale is prohibited, although possession and sale is legal.

NEW YORKER SLATED TO HEAD ELK LODGE

Justice Hallinan Unopposed For Post as Exalted Ruler

By The Associated Press. COLUMBUS, July 16.—Justice T. Hallinan, of New York, unopposed, was the probable choice of the national convention of Elks to succeed Michael F. Shannon of Los Angeles, as exalted ruler. The convention voted today.

Convention officials indicated Los Angeles would be selected for the 1936 gathering. Shannon reviewed the organization's work during the year at the opening convention session last night and said it was trying to make better churchmen of its members.

Rev. J. W. Whitfield, the pastor, and his son, Samuel, who was elected delegate by the East End B. Y. P. U. accompanied by representatives of the Sunday school and Women's Missionary society, left Monday for the convention.

The pool will be financed through a $25,000 bond issue to be provided by the city and a $20,000 grant to be given by the PWA.

Work in the improvement will be started within 50 days, the pool to be ready for use next spring.

TURKEYS ROAM RANGE

LOVELAND, Colo.—Branded turkeys roam the 606 ranch of George Kistler near here. A shepherd herds the birds over the range as if they were sheep. The Kistlers have received shipments of 3,500 young turkeys this spring. They fatten the birds, feeding them scientifically so that the gobblers will attain the maximum growth, tattoo them under the wings with the 606 brand, and then turn them out to "graze."

COMING ATTRACTIONS IN THE THEATERS

CERAMIC

Joe E. Brown's latest Warner Bros. picture, "Alibi Ike," which is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Ceramic theater on Wednesday, is heralded as the most hilarious film in which the famous star has yet appeared.

The story was written by the late Ring Lardner, who probably knew baseball players better than any other author. It's a pennant winning comedy of baseball and blonds.

"Alibi Ike," is a big league ball player, a crack pitcher and a batter whose average, contrary to most twirlers, runs around the 400 mark. He never makes a play on the field or off it without alibiing.

Even when he falls desperately in love with the sister of the captain's wife, he alibis about it. She happens to hear him making excuses for giving her an engagement ring, and turns him down cold, which causes a series of events as thrilling as they are ludicrous.

A sequence showing Ike kidnapped by a group of gamblers, from whom he escapes in time to win the final game in his pajamas, is just one of the exciting and funny incidents in the film.

There is more romance than usual in a Joe Brown comedy, his love affair winding up in a climax that is most unusual.

Joe, of course, has the title role, Olivia de Havilland, a newcomer to the screen, has the feminine lead. She did such a fine piece of work in Max Reinhardt's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," that she was immediately given a long term contract by Warner Bros.

William Frawley has the role of the baseball captain with Ruth Donnelly playing the part of his wife and the sister of Joe's sweetheart. Roscoe Karns is one of the chief ribbers who gets Joe in Dutch with his girl.

S'ATE

A drama of danger, dynamite sticks and dynamite fists, reckless daredevils and fatal feuds, and lovers of life who scoff at death will be seen when "Hard Rock Harrigan" comes Wednesday to the State theater, with George O'Brien, the screen's top action star, outdoing himself in the title role.

Replete with dramatic suspense, fast-moving action and pleasing romance, the story concerns a feud between a husky "hard-rock" drifter, portrayed by George O'Brien, and his tunnel boss, played by Fred Kohler, who are engaged in drilling a tunnel through a mountainside to complete a gigantic aqueduct project. The action of the film occurs principally in a construction camp and deep within the interior of a tunnel in a mountainside.

The lovely and talented Irene Hervey, whose performance in "Hard Rock Harrigan" will send her a long way on the road to success, appears as George O'Brien's leading lady. She is the operator of the camp commissary and her charm and beauty provide a welcome contrast to the rugged, untamed background where the "hard rock" men fight nature.

A cave-in and other untold dangers make for exciting sequences which will thrill State theater audiences.

"Hard Rock Harrigan" was produced by Sol Lesser for Fox Film release and was directed by David Hoard.

COLUMBIA

Noel Coward, the man responsible for "Design for Living," "Cavalcade" and "Private Lives," three of the most popular motion pictures of the past five years, at last turns motion picture actor himself to appear in the leading role of the new Hecht-MacArthur production, "The Scoundrel," which opened today at the Columbia theater.

Coward-actor, playwright, composer and generally conceded the most brilliant figure of the contemporary theater — plays a literary Casanova in this sharp and satirical tale of decadence in the New York smart set.

He is a hollow, artificial and brilliant publisher, so accustomed to playing at love with the unreal people who comprise his society that he fails to comprehend the realness of Julie Haydon, a young poetess, who offers him her heart. Coward takes her from the boy who really loves her, breaks her heart and sets her adrift in his corrupt circle. He goes on an airplane trip to escape one of his impetuous women and is reported killed.

While his former friends are cynically commenting on his demise, he suddenly reappears among them to pay fervent suit to Julie Haydon, the only real person he has ever known.

In a gripping, dramatic climax, she learns that it is not the real Coward who has returned, but his ghost which could not be still until it had found someone to mourn him. She was chosen.

NEW YORK PROMOTORS WAR OVER SCHMELING FIGHT IN SEPTEMBER

Garden Says German Will Clash With Max Baer, While 20th Century Club Indicates He's All Signed To Meet Joe Louis of Detroit

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, July 16.—It seems that Max Schmeling is going to fight somebody in September, but his opponent's identity has been obscured in a cross fire of contradictory statements.
The most that can be said at present is that the Teuton slugger will fight either Joe Louis, the brown bomber of Detroit, or Max Baer, the bliffling bridegroom from Livermore, Calif.
James J. Johnston of Madison Square Garden announced last night he had closed negotiations for a 15-round match between Schmeling and Baer on or about Sept. 26 at the Garden bowl on Long Island.
Mike Jacobs of the 20th Century club previously had announced Schmeling had been matched to fight at the Polo grounds Sept. 18.
Johnston said he had concluded his arrangements yesterday over the trans-Atlantic telephone with Jacobs, Schmeling's American manager, who is in Berlin.
"As a matter of fact," said Johnston, "we already had Schmeling under contract. We signed Baer, through his manager, Ancil Hoffman, last Friday."
The news incensed Mike Jacobs, who immediately called his name-sake in Berlin.
Turning on the telephone, he denied that Johnston's statement was based on actual developments.
"So Johnston said he called Joe Jacobs at Berlin, did he?" He fumed. "Well, I just this minute finished talking to Jacobs myself, and he said he never held a trans-Atlantic conversation with Johnston."
"Moreover, Jacobs told me he was sending a cable immediately to verify the fact that Schmeling has signed to meet Louis."
Joe Jacobs, reached in Berlin, said, however, that inasmuch as Schmeling had not yet returned to Berlin from a hunting trip, he had signed nothing.
Hoffman, manager of Baer, stood behind Johnston's statement and said prompt attention would be given to the sore hands of the laughing puncher who lost the title to Jim Braddock last month.
He said Baer would be ready to fight at the Garden's pleasure.

CUB'S BANKROLL UNDER BLANKETS

Wrigley Calls Halt to Free Spending as Players Fail to Produce

By The Associated Press.
CHICAGO, July 16.—That big Wrigley bankroll, which used to be dangled in front of club owners as bait for their high priced ball players, is doing all right with a tight rubber band around it.
And so are the Chicago Cubs, who are strictly on their own these days with orders to hustle and make good or prepare themselves for the ax that already has cut 15 members of last year's team from the squad.
For a club that has been shaken up completely from the front office down to the batboy within less than a year, the Cubs have been doing remarkably well this year.
Riding on a tide of eight straight victories, Charlie Grimm's young team today were trailing the league leading New York Giants by seven games with hopes of winning the pennant yet.

Columbiana
Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Henry announce the marriage of their daughter Nell Marie to Edward F. Robb, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Robb. The ceremony was solemnized June 26 at New Cumberland, W. Va., by Rev. C. M. Smith, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church. Mr. and Mrs. Robb are now enjoying a honeymoon trip in southern Ohio. Following their return they will make their home here where Mr. Robb is employed as an auto mechanic. Mrs. Robb graduated from the local high school in 1935 while Mr. Robb is an alumnus of the Boardman high school.
Miss Duell, girl evangelist, is preaching at revival services in the Nazarene church here. Services will be held each night excepting Saturday at 8 and at 11 a. m. on Sunday until July 28.
Mr. and Mrs. Willis Wire and family have removed from the Icen-hour property to New Middletown, Mahoning county. Mr. Wire is employed by the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

DENVER—Colorado is to have a state magazine. It will be rather an elaborate publication to boost the state.

DELVECCHIO AND JOE WELLS JR. CAPTURE SECOND

Turn in Best Ball of 68 In Youngstown Pro-Amateur; Trail by Stroke

Floyd Delvecchio, pro-greenkeeper at East Liverpool Country club, and his amateur partner, Joseph M. Wells Jr., son of the former Ohio amateur champion, yesterday captured second place in the Youngstown district pro-amateur golf tournament at the Mahoning Valley Country club in Girard.
The diminutive sharpshooter and his youthful partner put together two rounds of 34 each for a sparkling best ball of 68, four under par figures.
They finished one stroke behind the tournament winners, Ted Luther and Fred Kaup of the home course, who turned in 34-37 to pace the 10-team field.
In third place, two strokes behind the leaders, were Jack Miskal and Allen Frye of Lake Park, with 34-35-69. Bill Scott of Squaw Creek and Dr. C. R. Stambaugh, with 33-38-71, deadlocked with Frank Long of Hubbard and R. A. Kline, with 35-36-71, for fourth place.
Other scores follow: Andy Vellacott of Eastwood and R. E. McClure, 37-37-74; Neal Cross of Mill Creek and Frank Hughes, 35-39-74; John Jurida of Mahoning Valley and W. C. Curran, 36-39-75; Jimmy McNuglie of Youngstown and N. A. Price, 37-38-75, and J. E. Sproll of Clover Crest and Clyde Porter, 36-40-76.

REDS TOSS OFF JINX OF SCHUMACHER AND DEFEAT GIANTS 13-6

Cincinnati's Gang of Youngsters Turn in Sixth Straight Win as New York's Lead Over St. Louis Cards Declines to Five Full Games

By The Associated Press.
The bush safari of the Cincinnati Reds has produced some mighty fine ivory.
Out of minor league clubs here and there the Reds have brought in baseball timber that has been fashioned into an aggressive, fighting ball club. Some of the other teams are wondering what is going to happen when these fledglings become thoroughly seasoned.
The Reds shook off the four-year jinx of Hal Schumacher yesterday and trimmed the league leading New York Giants 13-6. It was the sixth straight victory for the Reds, breaking the 11-game winning streak of the Giants' ace right-hander, who was shelled from the box in the seventh.
On the team that walloped the Giants were some names that would be unfamiliar to one who hasn't been watching his box scores closely. Most of these players were drafted during the winter.
There was Myers, the shortstop who came up from Columbus in the American Association; Goodman the rightfielder who came from Rochester in the International; Campbell from Los Angeles on the Pacific Coast and Billy Sullivan from St. Paul.
Goodman collected four hits, including a triple; Myers got two including a homer and Sullivan and Campbell got one each.
Schumacher had beaten the Reds 14 times and tied them once since May 19, 1932. The defeat cut the Giants lead to five games over the rushing Cardinals, who turned back the buffeted Braves for their 11th successful victory.
The Chicago Cubs ran their victory string up to eight straight when they took a 10-inning encounter with the Phillies. Bill Herman's line double with two out sent Augie Galan home with the run that gave them a 2-1 verdict.
The Cards won by the lopsided score of 13-6 in the first of their four-game series. Dizzy Dean allowed 14 hits but his mates collected 18 safe blows to give the Dizzy one his 15th triumph of the season.
In the only American league game the St. Louis Browns defeated the Washington Senators 3-2, when Lyn Lary, whom Washington traded to St. Louis a few weeks ago, drove out a double that scored the deciding run.

900 TRAPSHOOTERS EXPECTED IN EVENT

Grand American to be Held At Vandalia Aug. 19-23
By The Associated Press.
VANDALIA, July 16.—Officials of the American Traps shooting association expect to see nearly 900 marksmen blasting away at targets in the Grand American trapshoot here Aug. 19 to 23.
Approximately 700 marksmen took part in the shooting last year. L. G. Dana of Derrick City, Pa., broke 98 out of 100 targets last year to win the Grand American handicap—the first time he had ever won a tournament. Dana will be on hand this year.
Walter Beaver of Berlin, Pa., who won the handicap in 1933, holds the North American amateur crown; Mark Arle of Champaign, is doubles champion; Joe Heistand of Hillsboro, O., is all-around champion; Mrs. Bunny Sanders of Keyser, W. Va., holds the North American women's championship and J. S. Dick of Minneapolis, the junior crown.
Frankie Parker, youthful No. 4 ranking tennis, is experimenting with a two-handed grip for overhead smash shots.

CARLSBAD CAVES IN NEW MEXICO DRAW TOURISTS

Travelers From Abroad Find Caverns a Museum of Nature's Past Glories

OFFER MANY MARVELS Spectacular Bat Flight Can Be Seen Any Time From March to October

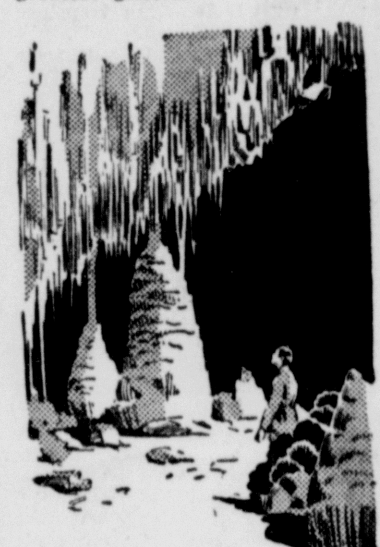

By TEMPLE MANNING

Among the greatest of nature's wonders can be seen within the confines of our own country. So, until we have visited them all, or at least most of these places, we have no right to call ourselves world travelers.

No, indeed! Especially since visitors come from abroad and desire to see Yellowstone and Yosemite parks and the Carlsbad Caverns. As well as the parks, the fame of these caverns in New Mexico has spread all over the world and it behooves us to make the trip sooner or later.

Is a side trip from El Paso, if one is traveling by train. Motor cars or coaches also make the 150-mile journey across the plains of Texas, the arroyos of New Mexico and then to the foothills of the Gaudalup mountains where the opening to Carlsbad is located.

They are the largest and most wonderful caverns in the world. They embrace in their endless confines all the natural wonders you ever have seen, a virtual museum in which nature, aided by time, has created some of her greatest glories.

King's chamber in Carlsbad caves. It is a five-hour trip past the spectacle of flowing rock and terrific conflagrations in colored crystal, out of which tongues of flame seem to leap up to sweep away the overhanging ledges.

Then there are king's and queens palaces and throne rooms. There are Chinese temples, ice chambers and great glaciers sprinkled with powdery snow. There are turquoise pools, titanic fairylands with stalactite chambers and stalagmite pillars. A gorgeous fountain of the fairies, huge lily pads, a cactus patch, a Washington monument, and scores of fantastically shaped totem poles and crystal spires leave the visitor breathless.

The outstanding feature of the tour is a visit to the Big Room, which is three-quarters of a mile long, 1,125 feet wide and 350 feet high, where it can be measured.

Series of Marvels

All these marvels are really a series of caves and channels dissolved out of a mass of limestone. But viewing all the beauty, it is difficult to believe that so matter of fact a description can be true. Every step of the seven miles of corridors and great chambers is an amazement. One can lunch in the Big Room while reflecting on the wonder of it all. Fresh water has been piped and it is a thrill to dine some 750 feet below the surface.

If the traveler visits the caverns any time from March to October and stays till dusk, the spectacular bat flight can be seen. It has been estimated that between two and three million bats emerge from their sleeping quarters in the caverns in rooms not traversed by the tourist parties. Of course, this is an interesting sight, but most travelers prefer to gaze upon the marvels of the various formations.

The lily pads in the Big Room seem as natural as the actual flower. Ceilings with colorful grape formations amaze and delight. The formations in the beautiful ice chamber beg description. The colors are beautiful beyond compare and include reds, yellows, purples and silvers more vivid than those of the most glorious sunset that ever colored a western sky.

You will be glad that you made the trip to see only one of the supreme scenic wonders of these United States, and you'll feel sorry for those persons who are familiar with Under den Linden, the Bois de Boulogne or Bond Street, but who have never seen even heard of Carlsbad Caves National park.

RENT YOUR HOUSE THE WANT AD WAY

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

SYNOPSIS: Rex Moore has come home from a dangerous flight over Africa to find that Laurie, the girl who is pretending to be his wife, in order to save his job, is dining with Mark Albery, who employs both of them. Rex is telephoned by Wanda Steele, a woman to whom he owes a great deal, and goes to call on her. Mrs. Steele's generosity has saved Rex's sight, but she wants more from Rex than gratitude. She wants love.

Chapter 24

THE MEETING

It was news to Rex Moore that Laurie and her sister had spent the week end at the Albery house in the country. Well, why not? Albery was evidently in love with Laurie. And when they parted, he and she, when this farce had played itself out, Albery would no doubt marry her. And it would be a great match for her and a splendid life. What had it got to do with him? She would have done very well out of being his widow for two years.

He stifled an angry laugh, as he rose to go. But he was going to do very well out of it, too. He was going to get everything he could out of Albery. This flight, after two years, had been like the taste of blood to a tiger, and it was only through Albery that he could continue his career.

Laurie was alone in the sitting-room when Rex came back. "Gladys told me you were here," she said. Her voice was cold, but she took an involuntary step forward, as she met his. "You might have let me know."

"I'm sorry I didn't think of it," he answered. His voice was rough. "I'd clean forgotten that your sister was here and that I ought to do the proper thing. But, after all, it will make things easier for you for her to know from the first that I'm an unmanly boor!"

Her voice was withering. "I've had enough of you. You've covered yourself with glory again, haven't you? Mr. Albery thinks the world of you. Your position with him is quite safe. We can make an end of it now, can't we?"

"That was the last question you asked me before I went to Africa," he reminded her. "You seem to think of nothing else."

"Why should I? It was our bargain, wasn't it?"

"Yes—" And then, all in a moment, he looked at her, and she was quite different. She was the same girl. He could not explain it; he did not understand. But for the first time he saw her blue eyes, soft and dark, like sapphires, and her glossy chestnut hair, and he knew that she was beautiful, desirable, wonderful. And he said to himself, "But I don't want to make an end of it!"

And his eyes held Laurie's, and, strangely enough, it was the same with her. She saw him for the first time, his strength, the fine, lean poise of his head, the deep, compelling gaze of his grey eyes, the sudden pulsating humanity of him when he smiled. She saw him, splendid, wonderful—the most wonderful man in the world.

And she said to herself—"What's the matter with me? He hasn't changed. He's Rex Moore—no, he isn't! He's the Rex Moore I dreamed of! I don't hate him any more. I want to go close to him. I want to stay with him. I don't want to go away—"

And because a woman is always more frightened when she discovers that she loves a man than a man is when he discovers he loves a woman, Laurie suddenly gave a stifled little cry and hurried to the door.

"I'm tired—I've got a busy day tomorrow. Good-night!"

He put out his hand, but she brushed past him. She was shaking in every limb. She was terrified of tumbling down, when he would pick her up and she would be lost.

"But Laurie, I've got a lot to tell you!"

Why, even his voice was new! It was warm; it drew her to him; it stole round her heart. But there was only one thought in her mind—to hide this madness from him. "Tomorrow will do," she called out lightly. "Honestly, I'm tired. We can talk much better in the morning."

Through the long, sleepless hours of the night Laurie said to herself, "I must be mad. I can't be in love with him. Why should I? What would he think? How he would laugh! It would just appeal to his cruel sense of humor that I should end up by falling in love with him!"

"It will be all right in the morning," she comforted herself. "It must be this ridiculous artificial life. Of course, it's all rubbish. My nerves are in pieces. When we separate, there's Mrs. Steele waiting for him. Of course, he'll marry her. Look what she can do for him with all her money. He'll be quite independent of Mr. Albery—of everybody. The first thing he did when he got back was to go to see her."

And so on, round and round in a circle, the same thoughts, all merging into the memory of Rex Moore's voice that had suddenly caught her heart, saying—"But Laurie, I've got a lot to tell you!"

Rubbish! What could he have to tell her?

With Rex Moore it was different. To begin with, he was physically and mentally exhausted after his arduous flight, and he slept quite a good deal.

But when he did wake up now and then, and especially after dawn, his thoughts did run on somewhat the same lines as Laurie's, although he was not shattered as she was by the discovery, but more angry with himself.

"Might have made a fool of myself," he reflected. "What ever would she have thought? That I was crazy, no doubt. I think I am. But there it is, I believe I'm in love with her. How ridiculous! She hates the sight of me."

And so on and so on, the same thoughts, all merging into the memory of Laurie's face, seeing it as if for the first time—the soft blue eyes, the loveliness of the little trembling smile, the sudden appeal to his manhood, the fierce desire to take her in his arms and then the blankness when she hurried out of the room with light, careless words of rebuff, like a slap in the face.

Well, anyhow, he hadn't given himself away.

Presently, he was splashing in his cold bath and planning to spend the whole of the day on the last of the articles for the American newspaper.

He had written all the others while on his trip, waiting for the rescue party to fetch the missing airplane. He had had no sleep for two whole nights. When this one was written, he would be able to pay back half the money Albery had lent him. That would give him a freer hand.

As to Wanda Steele and his debt to her, he would have to find some way of settling that.

His discovery that he had fallen in love with the girl who was supposed to be his wife, therefore, had undoubtedly altered his outlook on life, but it had not altered his world, as was to be the case with Laurie.

Laurie came into the dining-room when Rex had just finished his breakfast. She looked very smart and cool in her neat dark blue office attire, and she seemed to be in high spirits, although her eyes had a somewhat fixed expression.

Gladys had gone to rehearsal in Pinesbury Park, where they were opening in another week's time. While they were in the nearer suburbs, she was staying in the flat; but, later, when they went farther afield the troupe would have to live in lodgings again.

Laurie had had her breakfast with her sister an hour ago. Rex had been for a run around Battersea Park before his, as was his custom.

"Well, you said we could talk better in the morning," he said. "Have you time now?"

"If you like. I am not due at the office for three-quarters of an hour."

That touched him on the raw, as from now onwards every reference to her association with her employer must do.

"I understand you had something you wish to discuss," he said gruffly.

His voice and manner reminded her of the man in the train the first day they had met. And it came to her more that from that moment this spark had been struck from her being that was now alight and that made her furious and miserable at the same time.

Yes, it was true. Morning hadn't changed it. She wasn't mad; it mattered more to her than anything in the world.

Tomorrow, Rex and Laurie try to plan their future.

'How To Keep Well'

Liver Has Many Important Jobs To Do in Body

Organ's Functions in Bodily Operation Outlined By Dr. Copeland

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Of our various organs the liver is numbered with the most important. This vital structure is a part of the digestive tract. All the blood from the stomach and intestines passes through the liver where certain "toxins" or poisons are filtered out from the blood stream.

Since the liver has many functions to perform, it is a large structure. In fact it is one of the largest organs in the body. It is dark brown in color, located in the upper portion of the right side of the abdomen, just below the diaphragm.

Varies in Size

The weight of the liver is ordinarily about three pounds, but it varies according to the size of the owner. It is interesting to know that the liver is larger in infants and children and decreases in size as the child approaches maturity. It measures more than five inches in thickness on the right side, but is narrower on the left side, coming to a sharp edge.

As I have suggested, the liver has a great many tasks to perform. Some of the processes of this important organ are not yet entirely understood. But chief among its functions is the secretion of bile, which is poured into the intestine. This bile, together with the secretion from the pancreas, aids in the digestion of fats.

When the bile ducts are obstructed, "yellow jaundice" occurs and fat digestion is hindered. Jaundice may follow a severe cold or infection. Sometimes it is due to a stone or tumor blocking the bile duct.

Converts Sugar

Another important function of the liver is the conversion of sugar into "glycogen" or "animal starch." This is stored in the body and when need is converted into sugar. Since sugar furnishes heat and energy this function of the liver is of great significance.

Like other organs and structures of the body the liver may become infected, inflamed or diseased. When I was a medical student "cirrhosis," or hardening of the liver, was a common disease. Today it is not as frequently encountered. I believe this is due to our improved methods of living and better understanding of diet and the laws of nutrition.

Persons who are subject to liver disturbances should report to the doctor at periodic intervals. All fried and greasy foods, salt, pepper and other condiments should be avoided. Every effort must be made to improve the general health.

LOCK ENGINEERS WARN PILOTS TO CONTROL BARGES

Government Officials Seek To Check Damage To Dams Along Ohio

ECONOMY STRESSED

Navigator Appeals to Close Bear Traps Turned Down By Federal Office

Acting to check damage to lock walls and machinery on the Ohio river in this and other districts, United States engineers today advised steamboat operators to enter their tows under control and enter the chambers at reduced speed. It has become a practice to approach the dams with too much headway, it was declared.

In addition to decreasing accidents, the government also asserted, observation of the warning also would solve the problem of maintenance since funds have been curtailed.

Danger in Double Locking

Federal engineers have also gone on record against requests of navigators to close the bear traps, unless absolutely necessary, when locking between tows. The requests have been made principally by pilots and captains who held a backlash resulting when the traps were open, making the double locking of tows especially dangerous.

The American Barge line has completed the remodeling of the towboat Pioneer, which will be placed in the upper Ohio trade. Formerly a sidewheeler, it has been converted into a twin screw vessel.

The Pearson Manufacturing Co. of Wheeling is constructing a battery of four boilers for the steamer LaBelle of the Wheeling Steel Corp. They will be each 28 feet long, with a diameter of 40 inches, and equipped with 14-inch lap-welded flues.

Steel Cargo Passes Here

The Henry A. Laughlin was locked through dam No. 8 here Monday, enroute to Memphis and New Orleans with five barges of steel and three of pipe weighing 6,300 tons. The Fairplay also went down with two barges of pipe, one of nails and three of gasoline.

The Liberty was up with 70 tons of farm produce and 15 passengers. The excursion steamer Washington, which will make a run between East Liverpool and Steubenville Sunday came up.

The E. D. Kenna, a new towboat in the district, and the Cruiser, Leona, Clairton and Tecumseh, a government boat, were locked through with coal and empty barges.

REV. LEWIS TO GIVE ILLUSTRATED TALKS

Stereopticon Lectures Planned in Hammondsville, Irondale

Special To The Review. HAMMONDSVILLE, O., July 16.—An illustrated address, "Japan Faces Christward" will be given in the local Methodist Episcopal Church Wednesday night and in the Irondale Methodist Episcopal church Thursday at 8 p. m. by Rev. L. Chester Lewis, the pastor.

Fifty-five beautifully colored lantern slides will be shown. Two song numbers will be illustrated during the program. A free will offering will be taken.

Sundown Stories

BY MARY G. BONNER

The Advertisement

"MRS. QUACK DUCK drove me over in her one-and-a-half cylinder duck boat to get the papers from the nearest town we have in these parts," continued Willy Nilly.

"I'm going to put an advertisement in the paper they have in that place. If I hurry now I ought to be able to get there in my automobile. Two-Ways in about two hours I should say. It's still quite early and I think is still quite time enough for us to get the advertisement in before their papers are on the street this afternoon."

Willy Nilly took a piece of paper and wrote:

"LOST! A brown dog with a longish tail and beautiful eyes and soft, silky ears. Without a collar or license, but belongs to Willy Nilly of Puddle Muddle. Dog answers to the name of Rip. Will the finder please return as all hearts are broken in Puddle Muddle until our dog comes back to us."

Then Willy Nilly added a brief description of how Puddle Muddle could be found and at the end of the advertisement he put:

"Finder may pick out his own reward."

"What will the reward be?" asked Top Notch.

"Anything and everything we have!" replied Willy Nilly.

There

He took all the money they had and started off in his automobile. Two-Ways, Christopher Columbus Crow perched on the seat beside him so that Willy Nilly needed any errands done Christopher could do them. At last Willy Nilly reached the town and drew up before the newspaper office.

Tomorrow—Waiting.

MEET the WIFE

Mrs. Howard Jones.

Jane Jones, wife of the University of Southern California football coach, doesn't recommend trying to keep up with the Howard Harding Joneses. . . . Out of the grid season it isn't so bad, she admits, but when September rolls around it is just like holding open house for the rest of the fall. . . . Because the players, assistant coaches and even the public sometimes feel they can drop in to discuss the game with the coach. . . . Besides the task of rearing their daughter, Caroline, Mrs. Jones finds herself busy keeping up with husband in the drawing room, for he plays a very able hand of contract. . . . She professes to know nothing about football and would just as soon hear little about the subject. . . . In season or out Mrs. Jones is Howard's daily reminder. . . . he's as absent-minded as the proverbial professor when a big game is coming on, so Jane Jones takes this reminding business as just another household duty.

REV., MRS. F. A. DEAN WILL RETURN HERE

Former Presbyterian Pastor, Wife Describe New York Flood Area

Rev. Frederic A. Dean, former pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, and Mrs. Dean, who have been spending several months with friends and relatives in New York state, expect to return here soon to live, they advised friends today. The former, who resigned his charge here in the spring owing to ill health, has improved since undergoing treatment in a Sayre, Pa., hospital.

Writing from West Danby, near Ithaca, N. Y., Mrs. Dean said of the recent floods which swept the state: "We were near the flooded area but not in it. The reports of the flood cannot be exaggerated. Ithaca alone estimates $5,000,000 damage. Trains are now running over temporary bridges."

McKinnon Named Alternate To State Convention by Car Men

John Call of Wellsville has been elected delegate to the annual American Federation of Labor convention, which opens Aug. 19 in Columbus, by Division No. 52, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America. James A. McKinnon of Bradshaw avenue was named alternate.

Writing from West Danby, near Ithaca, N. Y., Mrs. Dean said of the recent floods which swept the state: "We were near the flooded area but not in it. The reports of the flood cannot be exaggerated. Ithaca alone estimates $5,000,000 damage. Trains are now running over temporary bridges."
